Portfolio Walk Through

I chose my background to imitate a pastel sunset. My text colours were left black and white depending on background so it is easier to read and nice to look at (too many colours could overwhelm the user). My text fonts are in the sans serif family as they are easy to read. I also chose to have a slightly lighter background on my header/titles to seperate it from the main background.

My Inspiration mainly came from http://findmatthew.com

Hello, I'm Matthew Williams.
I'm a full-stack web developer.

Matthew started me off with the idea of a space theme (inspired by his animated background), this slowly moved into the sunset theme after making my moodboard and realizing the colors I chose resembled a sunset more than space.

— I was then inspired to change my nav bar after starting. I changed it to be a side nav bar rather than across the page under the header after seeing Alberto's Nav bar example. This made it look neater and easier to use. I also made it fixed so the user of my website can easily navigate while looking through the pages.

Bolt

Like this pen to see the magic!...
Just kidding, it won't happen anything but I'll be really happy If you do so.

Biggest challenges

1. Random Margins when margin was set at "0".

2. When you change one thing and it changes everything but you don't know what you changed that isn't working.

3. Deciding on a homepage layout

4. Figuring out why my background wasn't working correctly

Accessibility

My main future enhancement I will do is make the background lighter when it starts going into the darker colours (purples and blues) so that the smaller black writing is easier to see.

Favourite Parts

1. Figuring out solutions / when something finally works

2. Seeing something come together when you started with nothing

3. Seeing my website at the end working on multiple screens
